

A surprising turn of events

by KH777

Category: How to Train Your Dragon, Kingdom Hearts

Genre: Fantasy, Friendship

Language: English

Characters: Riku, Sora

Status: In-Progress

Published: 2014-06-21 10:15:10

Updated: 2014-06-21 10:15:10

Packaged: 2016-04-26 19:16:06

Rating: K+

Chapters: 1

Words: 642

Publisher: www.fanfiction.net

Summary: The mission is clear. He would have to go talk to Riku, before he's forced to do something awful. A fan fiction about Kingdom Hearts and Dragons Riders of Berk.

A surprising turn of events

This is my author's note to you! If you were to imagine someone with injuries in my story or if a show was made of it the injuries were look like little black lines. This happens in many animes and cartoons. If someone got it by an attack the attack would be completely covered by special effects.

This work is rated K+/ things you might want to know for, kidnapping.

Rating in more detail: A person gets kidnapped and tied up but not treated badly.

Arms tied behind my back. I tried to think of some way to escape. This is awful! Riku was probably going to be forced to do who knows what because of me. I felt guilty but pushed the feelings aside, knowing it wouldn't help at all. I just have to think, there has to be some way out of this. Then it came to me, like a light bulb had come on the top of my head. They had tied up my wrists not my hands. If I summoned my keyblade, I could get out of this. I summoned my keyblade, and cut the rope. There was a guard outside, but he was sleeping. Using my keyblade to open the door, I walked away silently, hoping I wouldn't wake the guard up. Trying to avoid battles was my goal.

Having gone past the guards, I kept moving. I knew that we had to stop this guy from carrying out his plans, but I decided to find Riku first. This is partly because if this guy had worked this hard to make Riku do something, it must be important. So stopping his evil plan must come first. I also was worried about Riku; it must be very painful to him to be forced to do something awful. A chill ran down my spine, when I thought of things he might have forced Riku to do. Focusing on the task at hand, I carefully made my way through the cave.

Perspective change!

Climbing off of Nightclaw, (my natter), I surveillanced the area and saw no one. Leading my dragon through a small opening in the rock, I turned to walk away and sure enough, he followed. "No, stay back there Nightclaw," I ordered, motioned him back. "I'll be back soon, I promise." Now, I need to find the teenager that he was looking for. He called him a "dragon trainer." I got my dragon from my friend, so I really have no clue how to tame a dragon. I could see many dragons around the island called Berk. Having a low profile is key. So if I wanted to find this guy, I can't really ask around. This will definitely rise suspicion. It would also rise suspicion if I rode a dragon in there. Even if I do these things, I will at least get attention because of my clothing. But this can't be helped since I don't have anything else to wear and don't have time to get more clothing. So, I walked up from the beach into the village, carefully watching to make sure my dragon wasn't following me.

When I got into the village, I could see that there were many dragons about. But there weren't that many people riding dragons. Actually I could only see one dragon rider from where I was standing. It was a blonde girl with bangs over her eye. I followed her in a not sneaky way, (because I was in plain sight), and saw that she landed at an arena looking building. I kept my distance, but I had a feeling that the boy I was looking for was there. I was told that he was a little younger than me, with brown hair, and a black dragon called a nightfury. Inside the arena, they did different dragon training exercises.

End
file.